

ONDC will democratise e-commerce: Goyal

FE BUREAU
New Delhi, June 3

THE OPEN NETWORK for Digital Commerce (ONDC) will help “democratise e-commerce” in India so that millions of small mom-and-pop stores and retailers do not get extinguished like in the western world but get an equal opportunity to grow their businesses through the use of digital technologies, commerce and industry minister Piyush Goyal said on Friday.

Without an open platform like the ONDC, the existence of small retailers could be in danger with the growing influence of large e-commerce companies, which are indulging in several irregular practices and are under investigations by the Directorate of Enforcement, Goyal said. He didn’t name any player. The government, in late April, launched the pilot phase of the ONDC, a UPI-type protocol, in Delhi, Bangalore, Bhopal, Coimbatore and Shillong. From just about 150 sellers during the rollout of the pilot project, the ONDC is aiming to onboard about 30 million sellers spread across 100 cities in six months.

While highlighting the plight of small retailers in certain developed countries, Goyal said: “We do not want that to happen in India. We want them (small retailers) to get an opportunity to use technology to serve our consumers, we want them to get an equal opportunity to enjoy the fruits of the digital world, we want their data to be protected.”

ONDC typically offers a set of protocols and a technology-based solution which allows everybody to trade on a common platform. Goyal said certain sellers are preferred over others on the online market-places of the large e-commerce players. This results in the exploitation of many sellers. The ONDC structure, however, will have no favourites, it will offer equal opportunities to all, he asserted.

Monsoon makes slow progress, to pick up by June 17

SANDIP DAS
New Delhi, June 3

AFTER ENTERING KERALA coast on Sunday, progress of the southwest monsoon has been slow and is expected to pick up pace from June 17, a senior official with the ministry of earth sciences said on Friday. “The current pace of monsoon progress is sluggish but between June 17-23, large parts of the country are expected to receive intense rainfall,” M Ravichandran, secretary, ministry of earth sciences, told FE.

He said that a few weeks of sluggish progress of monsoon is quite natural and the country is expected to receive ‘normal’ rainfall during monsoon months (June-September).

India Meteorological Department (IMD) on Friday said that southwest monsoon has covered entire north-eastern states and some parts of sub-Himalayan West Bengal and Sikkim and predicted intense spell of rainfall activities in these areas.

IMD also predicted widespread light to moderate rainfall with thunderstorm and lightning over coastal Karnataka, south interior

Karnataka, Kerala and Lakshadweep and isolated to scattered rainfall over Andhra Pradesh, Telangana, North Interior Karnataka and Tamil Nadu, during next five days.

On Tuesday, the met department said that monsoon rains this year will be more than predicted by it in April, at 103% of the benchmark long period average with 81% chance of the rainfall being either “normal” or above. Meanwhile, the average water level in 140 major reservoirs in the country at present is up by 7% on year, the Central Water Commission (CWC) has said.

The water level is also 33% higher than the average of the last 10 years.

However, reservoir water level is down by around 26% and 9% respectively from the year-ago period in eastern and western regions. Reservoirs currently have 54.27 billion cubic metres (BCM) of water, which is about 31% of their combined capacity.
